

Decision Making – What would you do?

“What would you do?” problems focus on principles of faithful decision making. They can be introduced into almost any Sunday school lesson with any age group. Give your students practice with well-chosen examples. And be sure to give the children time to think about a problem before telling you what they would do. Teach them to think before they act.

“What would you do?” problems also make good Bible learning center activities. Let the children work on one or two, individually or in small groups, after the main lesson has been taught. Monitor their progress.

Affairs Of The Heart! What would you do?

You saw it coming and there was nothing you could do about it. Nothing you said or did carried any weight with her. She was your best friend in Sunday school and CYC. The two of you were inseparable. You were baptized together, and you vowed to each other at the time that the Truth would always be the most important thing in your lives. Everything would center on the Truth. Nothing would ever come between you and God.

Then she met Gaylord Manley. Gaylord had it all: a good job, good looks, great personality, so thoughtful and attentive. None of the boys in the ecclesia could hold a candle to him. Gaylord was miles ahead of them!

Now she and Gaylord have set the date. They are planning a big wedding at an exclusive country club. One of the club members is doing the service.

- 1 – She has asked you to be in the wedding party. What will you do?
- 2 – What do you think your relationship with them should be after they are married?
